Lin lived in a village in China. One day, a rich man gave Lin 10 silver coins. Lin had never seen so much money before. He was very happy that he had a lot of money now. At the same time he was afraid that someone might steal his money. So Lin decided to hide the money in the mud wall in his hut. He made a hole in it and put the silver coin into the hole. Then he covered the hole with fresh mud. After this Lin thought that someone might come to his hut looking for the money and he might look for it in the wall. Lin got an idea. He borrowed some brush and some paint and wrote these words on the wall where he had hidden his money – "There is no money hidden in this wall." Some days later, another villager called Wan came into Lins' looking for him. But Lin was not there. Wan saw the writing on the wall. He was surprised to read it.
